Let's Start!

I can't eat that!

Learning Outcome

Describe complicated or unusual events in the past through a wider range of B1 language in both work and social contexts.

Can Do Statements

- I can deal with a difficult customer.
- I can discuss how to deal with problems.
- I can talk about things I am supposed to do and things that are supposed to happen.

Ask your partner:

- Have you ever made food that did not turn out the way you expected? What was it?
- What did you do with it?

Let's Explore!

Vanessa is extremely annoyed.

* When you are "annoyed" you are slightly angry or irritated.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Vanessa: Alright. What happened?

Angela: I went through all of the pies, cakes and cheesecakes. This is the only one affected.

Vanessa: I am extremely annoyed. This should not happen. This is not the way to run a kitchen!

Angela: Tanya is supposed to be in charge of cheesecakes, but she went home sick. Daniel was supposed to finish them.

Vanessa: I'd better talk to him. Daniel, you had better have a good explanation for this.

Daniel: I'm very sorry but it's not my fault. This bag should be sugar. See? When I made the last cheesecake I had to use it.

Vanessa: And?

Daniel: Taste it. It's not sugar!

Vanessa: It's salt! We have to get in touch with the supplier! They'll have to check their supplies. Daniel, bring the bag. You'd better come with me. We have to explain this.

Vanessa: I've come to apologize again. Daniel.

Daniel: This is what I used in the cheesecake, Sir. You can see it's clearly marked. It's supposed to be sugar not salt. We're never supposed to taste the dessert batters. So, I did not know there was a problem. It looked fine.

Client: Thank you for coming out to explain. I understand that they do not want you tasting while you're cooking. However, after this I guess you ought to at least taste the sugar.

Let's Practice!

Learning Points

Dealing with Customers

When things go wrong when you are at work, you can talk about the problems using : should, should not and supposed to.

You can also use supposed to when you apologize.

You add not to firmly explain the problem wasn't because of you.

Example	Meaning
This should not happen.	It's not expected.
Tanya is supposed to be in charge of cheesecakes.	She was not in charge today.
Daniel was supposed to finish them.	Perhaps he did this.
It's supposed to be sugar not salt.	It's not as it should be.
This bag should be sugar.	I expected something else.
We're never supposed to taste the dessert batters.	It's unacceptable.

Discuss How to Deal with Problems

When you deal with problems you can use modals like: have to, had better, ought to, and might want to, for what is advisable.

You use the modals to show what is necessary or advisable to do.

Examples:

- I'd better talk to him.
- Daniel, you had better have a good explanation for this.
- We have to get in touch with the supplier!
- They'll have to check their supplies.
- You'd better come with me.
- We have to explain this.
- However, after this I guess you ought to at least taste the sugar.
