Let's Start!

There was a problem in the kitchen!

Learning Outcome

Describe complicated or unusual events in the past through a wider range of B1 language in both work and social contexts.

Can Do Statements

- I can deal with a difficult customer.
- I can talk about things I am supposed to do and things that are supposed to happen.
- I can discuss how to deal with problems.

Ask your partner:

- When was the last time you burned food when you were cooking it?
- How did you deal with the problem?

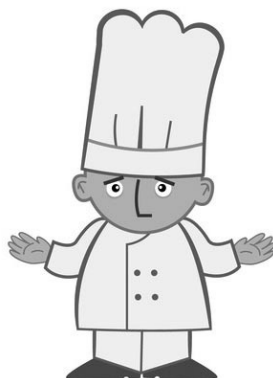

Let's Explore!

Vanessa apologized for an unforeseen problem.

* "Unforeseen" means that you did not realize this could be a problem before it happened.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Vanessa: Again, I would like to say how sorry I am. I realize this was an inconvenience. A night out at a restaurant is supposed to be a positive experience.
- Customer: Yes. It shouldn't end with salty cherry cheesecake.
- Vanessa: I hope the other dessert we brought was to your satisfaction.
- Customer: It was. Thank you. You ought to sue the supplier. You might want to change suppliers altogether.
- Vanessa: They are supposed to be very reliable. They ought to trace the sugar bag back to the packaging company, though.
- Customer: I agree. Thank you for your prompt action.
- Vanessa: It was the least I could do. As I said earlier, your dinners are on us tonight. I hope you will come back again.
- Customer: Yes. In fact we're supposed to come next Sunday to celebrate a birthday.
- Vanessa: I can assure you there will be no more mishaps.
- Customer: There'd better not be. You might want to tell your staff to be extra careful for a while.
- Vanessa: Yes. I realize I should be on top of everything. However, salt in the sugar bag is way beyond my control. Again, I humbly apologize for the unforeseeable hitch in your evening.
- Customer: By the way. You might want to go easy on the young chef. He looked terrified.
- Vanessa: I'll take that into account.

Let's Practice!

Learning Points

Dealing with Customers: Apologizing

When things go wrong when you are at work, you can talk about the problems using should, should not and supposed to.

When you say that you should or should not do something, it means it is a good idea or not a good idea.

When you say you are supposed to or not supposed to, it means that you have some duty or responsibility to do or not do something.

Example:	Implied Meaning:
I realize I should be on top of everything.	I am not on top of this.
They are supposed to be very reliable.	They are not reliable.
A night out at a restaurant is supposed to be a positive experience.	This is not a positive experience.
It shouldn't end with salty cherry cheesecake.	It did end with salty cheesecake.

Discussing How to Deal with Problems

When you deal with problems you can use modals like: had better, ought to, and might want to, for what is advisable.

You use the modals to show what is necessary or advisable to do.

Examples:

- You ought to sue the supplier.
- You might want to change suppliers altogether.
- They ought to trace the sugar bag back to the packaging company, though.
- There'd better not be.
- You might want to tell your staff to be extra careful for a while.
- You might want to go easy on the young chef.
